This is Pretty Good.

Mr. John C. Goodman, a carpenter of Danville, Ill., writes: "About two weeks ago a heavy saw log fell upon my foot very badly crushing it, so that I was unable to walk at all. I sent for a bottle of Ballard's Snow Liniment and kept my foot well saturated with it. It is now two weeks since this happened, and my foot is nearly well and I am at work. Had I not used Snow Liniment I should have been laid up at least two months. For healing Wounds, Sprains, Sores and Bruises it has no equal. No inflammation can exist where Snow Liniment is used. NOT ALL HEROES.

Engineers Who Stick to Their Engines Are Too Scared to Jump.

"Yes, I've been pretty badly scared several times since I began railroad engineering," said an old freight conductor, "and don't really know which one was the worse, although of course I always thought the last was. We're all of us human, and if a man tells you he doesn't get scared railroad engineering don't you believe him. I've seen lots in the papers about heroic engineers who staid at their posts and sacrificed their lives trying to save others. When you show me one man that takes those chances for humanity's sake, as they say, I'll show you a hundred who staid just because they were too scared to jump or didn't have time."

"A man thinks mighty quick sometimes, but he doesn't always have time to think of anybody that's behind him. When a fellow's running across the country a mile a minute in pitch dark and all of a sudden a big headlight flashes in his face or a pair of red lights show up in front, he's mighty apt to forget what the papers will say about a hero at his post. If he can move at all he shuts off and throws her over and plugs her with one hand, working the air brake just because it's second nature and he can't help himself. It's what they call mechanical, and a man will do it without really knowing what he's doing. Then he'll jump if he can."

"Talking about these heroes, I'm one of them myself. I've a big reputation up north as a man who'd stick to his post. It was when I first went to railroad engineering. I'd been raised in my superintendent's family, and when I got old enough I went to firing on the Milwaukee. About three months after I'd got a regular run I was out on a freight over night. We'd had a rush and I was pretty tired, and about 12 the head brakeman took the fire for awhile and I went to sleep. I was sitting on the front end of the seat, dead to the world, when a couple of red lights on the tail end of a caboose showed up. The freight ahead of us had broken in two and we caught the hind end in a cut. The engineer shut off, but he didn't have time to throw her over and plug her, and he and the brakeman both jumped without even waking me up."

"We hit the caboose pretty hard, I tell you, but instead of breaking her up or ditching, the pilot went under the car and raised it right up till it slid half way up the boiler. The shock woke me up, but I was only half awake then. She was moving along slow yet, and when I saw the red lights on the caboose the first thing that struck me was that we were on a siding and that the engineer had got off, leaving the engine in forward motion and she had leaked or sprung her throttle and gone into another freight on the siding ahead of us."

"I jumped over to the engineer's side and threw her over and plugged her hard. It didn't take much to stop and I stood there for a minute commenting profanely on the engineer's leaving her in forward motion, and yet if I had been wide enough awake to think of jumping, you bet your sweet life some other fellow would have been the hero and I'd tried to beat the engineer and brakeman out of the cab window."—Kansas City Star.

They Secured the Information.

The prisoner at the bar was a foreign looking person, whose beard covered his features so that it was quite impossible to say from just what country he hailed. The police justice looked up at him, then called for the German interpreter.

"Ask him what his name is?" said the justice, in an undertone, to the interpreter.

"Wie heisst du?" said the interpreter. The prisoner put his hand to his ear.

"Wie heisst du?" cried the interpreter. The prisoner looked stupid and did not answer.

"Call the French interpreter," said the police justice.

The French interpreter could not make the prisoner understand what was wanted of him, so they called the Spanish interpreter. This man, however, fared no better than had the others, so they called the Italian, and the Hebrew, and the Russian, and the Norwegian, and the Danish and Swedish, and the Turkish interpreters, but none of them could get an answer from the prisoner.

They came to the conclusion that he was shamming, so they tried to intimidate him in every foreign language known.

Finally the court policeman lost his temper.

"Why don't you tell his honor your name?" he cried.

The prisoner looked surprised.

"And shure," said he, "and is that what ye are after? Why didn't you say so. Me name's Dennis Mulheonan and I come from County Courk."—Kate Field's Washington.

Wouldn't Trust Him.

While an amateur was photographing an inn a man came up to him and asked: "How much do them likenesses cost? Oi should like my house took."

"Well," said the photographer, entering into the spirit of the occasion, "that depends on the size of the picture."

"As large as you can take 'em."

"Well, then, the price will be a shilling."

But upon this the would be customer began to bargain. A shilling was too much, he thought, but he would give sixpence.

"But mind ye," said he, "Oi won't pay till Oi gets ther picture. Oi don't trust yer phograffer fellows. Oi doan't."

He must have been surprised when some weeks later he received a photograph of his cottage, neatly framed by one of those "phograffer fellows," and all for nothing.

Perhaps he thought it was only by accident that the little bill for sixpence was not inclosed.—Across England in a Dog-cart.

A building up of the entire system follows the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, soothing cordial and bracing nerve—and a certain remedy for all the functional derangements, painful disorders or chronic weaknesses peculiar to women. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, melancholy and nervousness, brings refreshing sleep, and restores flesh and strength. For periodical pains, internal inflammation and ulceration, leucorrhea and kindred ailments, it is a positive specific—a guaranteed one. If it fails to give satisfaction, in any case, the money paid for it is refunded. No other medicine for women is sold on these terms. With an ordinary medicine, it can't be done.

That's the way its makers prove their faith in it. Contains no alcohol to inebriate; no syrup or sugar to derange digestion; a legitimate medicine, not a beverage. Purely vegetable and perfectly harmless in any condition of the system.

BLOOD POISON.

A destructive agent, that, like fire, consumes and annihilates life.

Is there a single particle of blood poison in your veins? Beware! Like the devouring flame, it increases in force and leaves only destruction in its track. Poison in the blood is due sometimes to contagion. Sometimes it is inherited. It ruins health, no matter from which source it springs. It feeds in a horrible manner on the flesh, and devastates every organ of the body. Pitiable in the extreme would be the condition of that man awaiting death from the effects of scrofula, syphilis, deep-seated ulcers, rotting of the bones, sloughing of the flesh, aching joints, etc., were there no salvation for him. But there is; for, although these conditions continue to grow worse if neglected, he nevertheless can be saved to a life of usefulness, and every trace of blood poison can be eliminated from his system and he made safe from further suffering, and his posterity insured against the possibility of a fearful heritage, easily and quickly, if he will only use that infallible antidote for blood poison, Dr. John Bull's Sarsaparilla. It contains just such ingredients as nature has provided for cleansing the blood of every impurity, for restoring strength to the digestive processes, for assisting in the correct assimilation of nutrition and building up new tissue. Try it when other remedies have failed. It has never and never will disappoint any one. J. B. Morse, Clinton, Ind., writes:

MADE PURE.

"I was for many years affected with contagious blood poison. Portions of my flesh seemed to be fairly putrid and mortifying. My hair fell out, and I was an object of repulsion to every one. My breath smelled horrible, and I had carbuncles and boils, and pieces of frontal bone had rotted and came out my nostrils. I lost the sense of taste and smell. I became a veritable bag of bones, and weighed only eighty-nine pounds. I could hardly sleep from pain, and was so weak I could hardly walk. The doctors said I could not live many months. A druggist persuaded me to try Dr. Bull's Sarsaparilla, and strange as it may seem, that remedy saved my life and brought me back to health. I now weigh 136 pounds, am free from pain and sores, and although have deep scars where sores were, I consider myself in excellent health."
